Brad Swope and Senior Airman Dan Galindo were named as primary contributors for the award. Former AFN broadcaster Staff Sgt. George Mauer received 1st place for his television spot production advertising the new base exchange. He left Lajes in October for a new assignment to March Air Force Base, Calif.

Team experiences tragic loss

Chap. (Maj.) Redmond Raux
Wing chaplain

Airman 1st Class Matthew Kampf, 65th Communications Squadron, was found dead Thursday morning, of an apparent suicide, by a security forces unit patrolling base assets on Praia Ridge.

As members of the Lajes family, we are all touched by the death of Airman Kampf.

We recognize the grief and loss that impacts his family, as well as ourselves.

Each of us deals with death and loss differently. Some people quietly mourn, others outwardly share their loss, and others grieve by responding to and caring for others who are expressing their grief.

There are many ways of grieving, and, at times, how and what we feel may not make sense to us. Our feelings are real, not 'good or bad.'

People who would like to speak with someone regarding their reaction to this loss have a lot of resources available here on base.

The chapel, 2-4211, family support center, 2-4138, and mental health, 2-5177, have people ready to listen and on call around the clock. After hours, call the command post at 2-4123.

Be responsive and caring during this time.

A memorial service for Airman Kampf is today, 10 a.m.

Potential airline strike could cause delays

Staff Sgt. Troy Johnson
Traffic management office

Because of recurring contract disputes throughout the airline industry, there is the potential for one or more airlines to have a work stoppage starting now and running into the summer months.

With more than 93,000 federal employees traveling on any given day, if there's a strike, travelers will certainly have questions about what to do.

While optimistic that a strike will not occur, the traffic management office staff wants to help ease the burden of traveling.

TMO Advice

 Make travel plans early. Don't wait until the last minute.

 Give orders to TMO as soon as possible. TMO can't issue tickets until they have the traveler's orders.

 Be flexible. Have a backup plan.

 Have the travel agency, TMO, commercial ticket office, airline and other emergency phone numbers ready for easy reference. TMO will give customers all the necessary phone number when they issue tickets.

 Check arrival and departure times often.

Call the airline before leaving home.

 Check in early at the airport in case of last minute delays or cancellations. People might have better luck rescheduling from the airport.

 Postpone travel if it isn't necessary.

 Consider using an alternative such as teleconferencing or conference calls.

For more information call the passenger travel section at 2-3442

Retirement plans

Some members can chose

WASHINGTON (AFPN) — Opting for a 20-year 50-percent retirement under High-3 or taking the Career Status Bonus of $30,000 and staying with REDUX at 40 percent is a choice that Air Force people, who initially entered the service Aug. 1, 1986, or later, will have to make beginning this August.

This opportunity to elect retirement plans was a result of the 2000 National Defense Authorization Act, said Maj. Jeff Keef, chief of military estate and special pay policy at the Pentagon.

"The legislation, designed to give service-members the same retirement benefits, transferred all members from REDUX to the more generous High-3 system,"

Keef said. "However, at their 15th year of active duty, these members may instead elect to receive a $30,000 CSB and retire under the REDUX retired pay system."

The basic eligibility requirements for electing and receiving the Career Status Bonus are:

- have a Date Initially Entered Military Service of Aug. 1, 1986, or later;
- be on active duty with 15 years of active uniformed service;
- meet eligibility requirements to remain on active duty through 20 years of service to include:
 - not having an approved date of separation;
 - no pending court-martial or administrative discharge;
 - not being subject to any quality force conditions that would prevent continued service to 20 years.

Military personnel flights have made preliminary notification to the first Air Force people eligible for the CSB, Keef said. Normally, people will be notified on or before the date a person completes 14 years and six months of active duty.

Those eligible who want to elect the bonus must complete a written CSB agreement that states the person will remain on continuous active duty until the completion of 20 years total active federal military service.

"Under most circumstances any CSB recipient who fails to serve on active duty to (his or her) 20th year must repay a prorated amount of the $30,000," he said.

If a member isn't eligible for the bonus, the notification will explain why not and will inform the member whether there will be an opportunity to make a CSB/REDUX election in the future.

The CSB is taxable income as of the date on which the payment is made to the member, Keef said.

However, if a person is eligible for a combat zone tax exclusion or qualified hazardous duty area tax exclusion on the date the bonus election becomes effective, the bonus, within allowable limits, will not be considered taxable income.

People may avoid paying taxes on the entire $30,000 if they are a Thrift Savings Plan participant and contribute part of their bonus to the TSP, Keef said.

The current annual elective deferral limit of all TSP participant contributions from taxable pay, including the CSB, is $10,500.

"Since the TSP will not be implemented until October, with the first contributions beginning in January, anyone eligible to receive the CSB may defer their election until two months after the start of the TSP," he said.

Keef cautions military members that electing the CSB with REDUX instead of remaining with the High-3 retirement plan

Tools and programs to help people reach a decision

— an educational fact sheet which will be provided to eligible people at the point of notification that contains information to help them analyze the choice;

— a Web-based retirement calculator developed for financial comparisons and a "Career Status Bonus Decision Center" on the Web at <http://pay2000.dtic.mil/>;

— information about the different retirement pay plans on the Air Force Personnel Center Web site at <http://www.afpc.randolph.af.mil/retsep/>; and is a complicated financial decision they should not make in haste.

— personal financial management counselors at the family support centers who can provide additional financial counseling/education on the CSB/REDUX choice. For more information call the Lajes family support center at 2-4138.

"People are asking whether the change in the law and whether CSB with REDUX is a good deal for them," he said. "The obvious answer is that you have a good deal in that you now have a choice — stay in your current retirement pay system or change to a reduced one with the benefit of a significant bonus. With that choice comes some risk, however.

"Responsible people will need to be well informed and be making reasonable assumptions about the future when making this choice," he said. "Either choice is not universally good or bad and will have to be analyzed in light of one's own personal circumstances. While comparing life-stream earnings of the two options may be one way to analyze this choice, one's own values, expectations, and goals will probably have influence on how the decision will ultimately be viewed."

For information call the military personnel flight at 2-2155, or a family support center financial counselor at 2-4138.

Likened to constantly moving targets, illegal drugs go from base to base, area to area. But the Air Force has a message for those using or inclined to abuse drugs: "You can run, but you can't hide."

Ecstasy on island

Laura Clagg
65th Medical Group

Ecstasy has been making headlines across the nation, across the Air Force and all the way across the Atlantic to Terceira.

Recent drug cases at the U.S. Air Force Academy and Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., have also put military drug use in the spotlight.

The number of ecstasy related investigations has increased from 66 to more than 400 in one year, according to Air Force Office of Special Investigations.

"There's no room for complacency here at Lajes Field just because we're in the middle of the Atlantic," said Col. Bill Percival, 65th Air Base Wing and U.S. Forces Azores commander.

Ecstasy, the street name for methylene-dioxymethamphetamine which chemically combines methamphetamines with hallucinogenic properties, has been reported to be on the island, he said.

"At one point we were looking at implementing a random weekend drug testing policy here at Lajes," he said. "There are a few other bases, including Lackland and Whiteman, that are doing the weekend tests now."

However, Lajes officials have come up with a better solution.

"We found a new, more sensitive test that can detect ecstasy up to 72 hours after use" the colonel said. "That's much better than bringing people in at random over the weekend for the test."

Ecstasy belongs to a group of drugs known as Club Drugs, which got their name from users at night clubs and bars.

Ecstasy's effects are described as giving users an overwhelming sense of euphoria, heightened emotional sensitivity and increased stamina. Side effects include increased heart rate and body temperature that can lead to severe dehydration. This increase in body temperature is life threatening.

The long-term side effects of ecstasy use are just beginning to be understood. The initial effects of ecstasy may last up to 24 hours, but the side effects -- confusion, depression, sleep problems and anxiety, can last for weeks after use. Ecstasy alters serotonin levels in the brain and potentially leads to long-term or permanent damage to the brain's critical thought, memory and pleasure centers.

"The reality is that as long as drugs exist in America, we'll have to stay vigilant in combating their presence in the military," said Stephen Minger, an Air Force OSI supervisory special agent at Andrews AFB, Md. "The Air Force's responsibility is to try to identify where drug abuse is occurring, and eliminate it and take action where necessary, in terms of military justice, education, prevention and deterrence."

Illegal drug use or possession is punishable under the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Civilians and family members are also subject to prosecution.

To report suspected drug use or possession, call the law enforcement desk at 2-3223 or Lajes' OSI at 2-4180.

Team to visit Lajes, tell members stories to hometown newspapers

1st Lt. Kris Skopeck

Public affairs

A two-person team from the Army and Air Force Hometown News Service will visit Lajes Field May 13 -18.

The team, a writer and photographer, will interview members stationed here about their military duties and Lajes assignment and photograph them in their duty environment.

Interviewees will be asked to provide some basic next-of-kin information on a modified hometown news release form as well as answer a series of questions on the reverse side of the form.

The information and photos gathered will be used to produce in-depth, full-length feature stories about the interviewees to be distributed to their hometown newspapers.

Participation in the program will be voluntary, with interested members meeting the team at a location to be announced at a later date.

"This is a unique opportunity for us to tell others about the great things we do for our nation," said TSgt. Jose Ruiz, Lajes

Hometown News Release Program Manager. "I've been in for 15 years, and I'm still approached by friends and family in my hometown with questions about what I do in the Air Force."

Headquartered at Kelly Air Force Base, Texas, the Army and Air Force Hometown News Service is a field operating agency supporting the Secretaries of the Army and Air Force. More than 14,000 newspaper, television and radio stations subscribe to the agency's free service, which in 1999 produced and distributed more than 750,000 individual news releases.

The agency's print features programs spotlights military people in unique assignments, locales, exercises or events. The program sent more than 4,415 releases to daily and weekly newspapers in 1999, many of which were published as front page or full-page spreads and seen by more than 36 million readers across the United States.

"This program is also a great recruiting tool," said Command Chief Master Sgt. Steven Crocker. "I hope everyone will take advantage of the opportunity to tell the Air Force story."

Time to clean out medicine cabinets

Staff Sgt. Beverly Isik

Public affairs

The 65th Medical Group pharmacy staff is urging everyone to take a close look at what's inside the family medicine cabinet.

"If you haven't cleaned out your medicine cabinet in a while, now is the time" said Capt. Yukli Elliot, 65th Medical Group pharmacy officer. "It could make a big difference in the safety and effectiveness of the medication you and your family rely on."

Medicine is designed to improve patients' health and quality of life she explained. However, those that are old or outdated or not stored properly may lose their potency or become harmful.

During Clean Out Your Medicine Cabinet Day, April 28, pharmacy workers will be at the commissary entrance from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. to collect outdated and unused medication people find.

"We want people to bring all the medication they have cleaned out of their cabinets to us for safe disposal," she said. "If you don't know if a medicine is still good, stop by and ask us."

Medical group officials don't want people to throw the old medication away or flush it down the toilet.

"People shouldn't throw medicine in the garbage, because children or animals may get into it," the captain said. "And to maintain a good environment, it's best not to flush medicine down the toilet."

As always, expired medication may be turned in to the pharmacy at any time the clinic is open.
